Since 1992, Indian Association of Palliative Care is organizing this conference, which has developed, evolved and continued to provide a platform for the voice of those working in palliative care. A growing number of delegates, representing a range of disciplines from across India and overseas are attending this conference. The conference provides a unique opportunity to network and meet with colleagues, clinicians, caregivers, researchers and educators in palliative care from across the globe to exchange knowledge and to share experiences.

Delhi, the capital territory of India, is a massive metropolitan area situated in the Northern India. About AIIMS

Creating a country imbued with a scientific culture was Jawaharlal Nehru's dream, and post after independence he prepared a grand design to achieve it. Among the temples of modern India which he designed, AIIMS was a centre of excellence in the medical sciences. Nehru's dream was that such a centre would set the pace for medical education and research in the Southeast Asia.

The health survey and development committee, chaired by Sir Joseph Bhore, an Indian Civil Servant, had in 1946 recommended the establishment of a national medical centre which would concentrate on meeting the need for highly qualified manpower to look after the nation's expanding health care needs. The dreams of Nehru and Amrit Kaur and the recommendations of the Bhore Committee converged to create a proposal which found favor with the government of New Zealand. A generous grant from New Zealand under the Colombo Plan made it possible to lay the foundation stone of All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS) in 1952. AIIMS was finally created in 1956, as an autonomous institution through an Act of Parliament, to serve as a nucleus for nurturing excellence in all aspect of health care.
